Join us for the Forest Resources Monthly Seminar

The Indigenous roots of Sustainable Forestry in the USA presented by

Mike Dockry
Assistant Professor Department of Forest Resources

Sustainable forestry in the USA began on the Menominee Indian Reservation in the 1850s. This talk will discuss the history of Menominee sustainable forest management, different cultural values around sustainability, and how Menominee people today understand sustainable forest management. The talk will integrate archival research, oral history interviews, and historical images to tell the story of ecological change and how that change impacts different understandings of sustainability.

Monday, November 11, 2019
3:00-4:00 p.m.
110 Green Hall
St. Paul Campus

If you can’t join us, watch remotely at: http://z.umn.edu/FRsem

Light refreshments will be available

Following seminars will be:

Monday, November 25 at 3:00: Dyani WhiteHawk, Artist and Curator
Topic: Indigenous Representation in Art

Monday, December 9 at 3:00:
Topic: Update on U.S. Higher Education Enrollment Trends in Natural Resources, with an Emphasis on Diversity